Will Spencer: 2003, 2004, 2006

By: Bryan Hathaway

If we had to elect a brand-new Jesus, I'd vote for Will Spencer every time. A man we all feel like we know somehow, a smile that could charm the bees, and the first person you'd want beside you in a milk-drinking / cheese-eating contest.

The basic "Michael Jordan" of DOL, being the only 3-time winner of the league is the least of his accomplishments. The only league Dynasty? Got it..... How about an All Time Record? Got one..... League rivalry? Yup. .... Surely he's never been the League Manager? 3 years..... Benny the Jet's PF Flyers Awards? Try 4..... Sally O Malley 50 Wins Award? Yup..... Division Champion? Yes..... Did we mention a first ballot Hall of Famer and only ever back to back winner?

We feel like he's going places.

Bryan Hathaway: 2005, 2007

By: Some Random Guy (Not Bryan Hathaway)

Your second inductee to the Hall of Fame, and 2-time league champion, Bryan Hathaway's charms and good looks are the face of DOL.

He may be contemplating retirement in 2013, but in reality, what else is there left to accomplish.

Troy Jordan: 2008

By: Bryan Hathaway

The original DOL "Bad Boy," Troy Jordan.

Before Whitson came into the league with his nonchalant attitude towards the rules and his "new whitson order" There was Troy Jordan. You know the "Troy Amendment" in the league rules? Yeah... that's because this James Dean of the league stretches the limits, stretches the rules, and looks out for number one...Troy Jordan.

The spray painted nWo belt graces the Hall of Champions, symbolizing what the original nWo stood for, no respect for the rules.

Troy Jordan... YOUR 2008 Champion, like it.... or not.

Weston Lunsford: 2009

By: Bryan Hathaway

Lunsford entered DOL in 2008, his story is well known. How he was dubbed the “prodigy” and bred from birth by his parents for one thing... Fantasy Football. It took him just one year to win the championship belt, but quickly backslid into a well publicized battle with addiction and depression before being be-friended by his rival, Taf Bentley. His stints in rehab and weekend trips with “bestie” Bentley has made his road to recovery a good one as Lunsford remains a stable model franchise owner in the league.

But lets just be honest for a second.... Lunsford’s best feature has got to be those arms. I mean look at those canons. Go ahead... look. I’ll wait.....

GQ has tried to get this guy for years, but Hathaway’s stronghold grip on releasing franchise and advertising rights until this season has kept this beautiful mug (no homo) from gracing the magazine’s historical pages. (ok, a little homo).

Taf Bentley: 2010

By: Bryan Hathaway

We all read the heart-tugging back story of the one, Taf Bentley. How his mother hid and snuck through towns like Brandenburg and Schleswig-Holstein, to sneak her blonde hair-blue eyed baby out of Germany when Bentley was a child. How, embracing his German heritage, Bentley made his living as a bouncer at the Double-Deuce club, going by the name "Blitzkrieg." All before Hathaway discovered him and gave him a chance at fame and fortune in the Big Leagues of Fantasy Football in 2007.

Fast-Forward to 2013, and Bentley is a near shoe-in for the 2014 Hall of Fame class. One vote kept him from being a first-ballot member, but his credentials speak for themselves.

Albeit now a multi-billionaire, owner of Taf inc., current owner of WRINKLEY FIELD and the Snot Rockets Franchise, Bentley has always kept a level head and being appointed to the Unity Council shows the type of respect he commands by his peers in DOL....

...well, except Troy Jordan.

Stephen Whitson: 2011

By: Bryan Hathaway

Very little is known about this mystery man of DOL. A big city "balla" reigning from Tallahassee, Florida, Hathaway made the call to Stephen Whitson in 2011 for a shot at the big leagues. Hathaway proved once again his eye for talent as Whitson became the first ever rookie to win the championship in 2011. Well publicized offseason partying proved to hinder his performance the following year.

"Whitson" as he likes to be referred to as on the streets, likes to follow his own rules. He began the "nWo" (new whit son order) in 2012, but lack of success on the field kept it from catching on and it eventually dwindled away, never gaining another member.

Well known for his house parties, it is said the 2012 film "Project X" was loosely based on an actual one of his parties where people were viciously beaten with socks full of batteries and Super Nintendo Video games and hamsters molested with a toothbrush.

Rolling to his own set of rules, and "Doing Me" as he says, Whitson hopes to get back to the top of DOL...but one thing is certain, no matter what side Whitson finds himself on with the law, or league officials, or public opinion... it will always be "His" side.

Ashton Jernigan 2012

By: Bryan Hathaway

Sporting a new wardrobe and an entourage for his first public interview since winning the 2012 DOL Champion, Ashton Jernigan said he is enjoying the new found fame and attention.

"I've always dreamed of being DOL champion, since I was a child growing up on the farm. I entered the league three years ago and once I saw what it was to be "Champion", that's all that was on my mind."

Jernigan just signed a lengthy contract extension with DOL as well as endorsements from Wheaties and Nike. A-Train, inc. stock is soaring through the roof and Ashton himself is on top of the world.

"I know we have to begin off-season training camp for next year before too long, but right now I'm just soaking it all in and enjoying being on top."
