Famous Mount Crushmore Facelift

Story by: DOL Beat Writer

Funds seem to be no problem for DOL league manager Bryan Hathaway, nor the league. One would think league money could be used for something better, but apparently Mount Crushmore seems to be pretty high on the priorities list.

Just a week, maybe two, after construction was completed on adding new league champion Ashton Jernigan's face to the illustrious Mount Crushmore, the sounds of construction can now be heard echoing once again throughout the caverns of Mount Crushmore. (Continued on Page 2)

When contacted, league officials did not have a whole lot to say, but an official statement was released from league officials shortly thereafter:

"The unity council has passed what will surely be a controversial decision to some, but most will understand. We feel that Mt. Crushmore is something that should be treated nearly as special as the DOL Hall of Fame. We feel like the "specialness" has rubbed off some since now over half the league's likeness now graces the mountain top.

The Council has passed a bill that will grant the league funds that will allow the removal of the faces on Crushmore, and the addition of one more. The Council has decided upon majority vote that the League Founding Fathers should be the lone faces to grace the mountainside. League champions have their own special section on the website dedicated to just them, while so does the Hall of Fame. If not for the fathers, we would not even have the league so we felt they deserved this recognition.

It is worth reminding everyone that only two of the three founding fathers sit on the council and this is something that needed at least 3 votes to pass."

The construction will take much of the offseason to complete, but we know league officials would like to finish as quickly as possible as Crushmore is a money-making machine with its millions of visitors a year. We will be covering the progress of this story all off-season. the current estimated cost will be somewhere in the billions.

Jonathan Creel has worked at Crushmore for a while now, he offered his thoughts on the change:

"Wait.. What is happening? They're doing what? Well, I know that a lot of people will stop visiting because they get tired of seeing the same thing over and over. The new faves kept it fresh, I am worried about how it will remain open and exciting for visitors, and how the people in the league will feel when their face doesn't make it up there? Tough to handle."

Newsletter

This DOL Newsletter will be released very frequently throughout the offseason and Hathaway already has big stories in upcoming issues. This will be emailed to you unless other wise told. I hope everyone enjoys this new part of D.O.L.

Eric Crouch?

You don't remember Eric Crouch? Not many do... He was the quarterback for Nebraska and won the Heisman trophy in 2001. Crouch was initially signed by the Rams as a wide receiver, but wanted to play quarterback...he retired before playing a game for the Rams, but came back and signed with the Chiefs in January of 2005.

Chad Hunsucker, league rookie in 2012, has been drawing comparisons as he announced his retirement shortly after the 2012 playoffs ended. He re-approached league officials shortly thereafter and is now back on the docket for the 2013 season.

Ashton's 2012 Championship shirt has been ordered.
